Story Creators Challenge

Younger children might not understand why most people have to stay at home at the moment, and why they can't see their friends or family, or do their usual activities like playing at the swings, going swimming, and going to nursery or school.

Stories are a good way of helping them to understand a bit more. Have a go at creating a story about a young child, or even a young animal, making it fun but giving the serious message about how we can try to keep ourselves and other people healthy.

Your story could be a storyboard or cartoon strip, a paper book with pop-out or lift the flap elements, or created using technology. It might help you to look at some picture books to get ideas, or watch a bit of CBeebies or similar younger children's programmes.
